

Monday, April 11 – Refueling and Restocking – Johnny Wise

We started off our day learning that the gasoline dock in the marina where we anchored “no longer exists” – it apparently closed two months ago. As we are in La Paz, a large port city in Baja, arranging a refuel with another dock only took a few minutes. After we refueled, Captain Oona departed our company – she had to fly to Mexico City for a press conference on behalf of Sea Shepherd. In her stead, First Mate Mike will act as captain. In addition, JP needed to remain ashore for the day to take care of publishing some media to Martin Sheen’s facebook page and Sea Sheperd’s page, while some of the other crew restocked some depleted supplies. While they all took care of their business, we set out on a short day trip to find some whales – we left port around 11am and were due back at 4pm. We found no whales today – but we did encounter a curious whale shark! Photos attached of the whale shark and an amazing sunset that concluded our day.

Johnny

See the shadow in the water? Whale shark!

